Hon. H. N. Smith, one of the leading democrats of the state, and for many years warden of the state penitentiary dropped dead at Elkhart, Calumet county, Wednesday morning. He was 61 years of age.

Eleven thousand veterans marched in the parade of the Grand Army of the Republic at San Francisco on Tuesday, and 350,000 people witnessed the procession. General Sherman's carriage was successfully stormed by six young ladies armed with roses.

Alfred Krupp owns probably the largest business in the world dependent on one individual. The works within the town of Essen, Germany, occupy more than 500 acres, half of which are under cover. According to a census taken in September, 1881, the number of hands employed by Mr. Krupp was 19,000, and the members of their families 45,770—making 65,870 persons supported by its works.

According to the New Orleans Times-Democrat, Louisiana lost two hundred million pounds of sugar last year by imperfect sugar milling. The quantity of sugar actually made last year was 280,000,000 pounds. There is only one first class sugar mill in the state; most of the others are clumsy affairs which leave nearly a half of the saccharine matter in the bagasse or refuse cane. The planters are aware of this enormous waste, but say they cannot afford to throw away their old machinery and buy new.

A total eclipse of the sun occurs August 29, which will be visible as a very small partial eclipse in the southern part of New England and the Atlantic states. The path of totality commences at the Isthmus of Panama, crosses the northern part of South America and some of the adjacent islands, crosses the Atlantic ocean in a southeasterly direction, strikes the coast of Africa near Boulogne, and ends in Madagascar. The conditions for observing it are more favorable than they were in the total eclipses of 1883 and 1885, when the line of totality passed almost entirely over the Southern Pacific ocean. Doubtless astronomers will be on hand at many points to observe the eclipse. The limit of the eclipse is 1 degree north of Boston, so that we must be contented with a touch of the phenomenon.

The Harper's Weekly very thoughtfully suggests: "Offensive partisanship in office are not confined to our party, and the dismissal of a democratic office-holder as an offensive partisan will be more serviceable to reform than the democratic dismissal of ten offensive republican partisans." All of which is very true, but does the Harper's expect that Mr. Cleveland shall remove even one democrat for offensive partisanship? If it does, it will be disappointed. Among the twenty or more thousands removed from office during the past sixteen months not a single one has been removed because he was a democratic offensive partisan. Not one. All the removals from office have been made because the incumbents were republicans, and their places were wanted for democratic partisans and workers. For this reason, the Harper's boast that this is a civil service reform administration is a humbug. Republicans are turned out of office because they are republicans, and democrats are put in their places because they are democrats. This is the long and the short of the story, and the Harper's can't improve it. It is a democratic administration, a partisan administration, and the offices are being given to the democratic party at the rate of eight or ten an hour, and any attempt to change the color of the administration is ridiculous.

SAMUEL JONES TILDEN.
YONKERS, N. Y., Aug. 5.—Samuel J. Tilden died at Greystone Wednesday morning at 8:30 o'clock. Dr. Charles E. Simmons and Miss Gould, a relative of Mr. Tilden, were at the bedside a few moments before Mr. Tilden died. He tried to speak, but only moved his lips, failing to make any sound. He passed away quietly and peacefully. His death occurred in the south chamber of the mansion, overlooking the Hudson. No arrangements have yet been made for the funeral. Mr. Tilden was born on Feb. 4, 1814, in New Lebanon, Columbia county, and was therefore 72 years old. He leaves one sister, the mother of the late Col. Pelton, and several nephews, children of his brothers, Moses and Henry Tilden.

For the past four months Governor Tilden has been in unusually good health and he used his yacht and carried daily with evident pleasure. This sign of health and returning vigor was exceedingly gratifying to him. Sunday morning, however, a change was noticed. Soon after Mr. Tilden arose he was stricken with an acute attack of diarrhoea and nausea, this lasted for several hours, but finally succumbed to Dr. Simmons' treatment. He felt Mr. Tilden very weak, however, and he was compelled to remain within doors all day Monday and Tuesday. Tuesday afternoon there was a recurrence of the symptoms that had so greatly distressed him. Dr. Simmons worked until 10 o'clock and again restored his patient to comfort.

An attempt was then made to carry Mr. Tilden to his room from the sitting-room in which the attack of the morning had come upon him. Dr. Simmons and the physician attempted to carry him, but he preferred to walk. They walked by his side and assisted him to the first landing of the great staircase. He was compelled to stop here and Dr. Simmons then applied the failure of the failure of the heart. Mr. Tilden could scarcely breathe. After a short rest, during which the stricken man was in great distress, he was carried to his room and put to bed.

He obtained no relief for the heart trouble, however, and a large physician's chair was prepared in his bed-chamber, to which he was removed during the night, and with his head slightly raised upon a pillow he was able to breathe. Dr. Simmons was not relieved, however, by this, and at 7 o'clock he dispatched a messenger for Dr. Swift, who came to the house at 8 o'clock. Dr. Swift entered the room, raised the body of the patient, and applied his skill to the well-known face of the physician. "Tilden was peculiar," said Dr. Swift, "and I was not prepared to meet him. As soon as I saw his eyes, and the eager appeal they showed, I knew he was a dying man."

A consultation was held, but nothing could be done. No word was spoken by Mr. Tilden after Dr. Swift's arrival. He remained breathing with some difficulty until 5 o'clock. As the hand of the clock approached 6 o'clock a difference was noticed in the voice and wrinkled face, his eyes slowly closed, and his muscles relaxed. He was dead.

Mr. Tilden's life for a long time past has been that of an invalid. His walk was slow and feeble, his personality right in his eyes, but with a certain uncertainty. He could not speak above a whisper, and his thin and furrowed face and labored movements evoked sympathetic comments from the villagers who saw him leaning on the arm of his valet or his companion, Miss Gould, as he stopped to rest from the "T" cart that took him on fine days for a ride about the country. His mental faculties, however, were bright and unimpaired up to the last. He suffered much from indigestion, and twice a week was visited by his physician, who often has spoken lately of Mr. Tilden's ill robust intellect. His memory was unusually retentive, and to the last he preserved the most exact method in dealing with the concerns of his house and farm. Each day he talked with his business manager, and considered secretary, Mr. George W. Smith, and shared a complete acquaintance with the smallest details of his business.

His machine was administered with almost mathematical exactness, and it rarely happened that his night doses were missed at the regular time. And it was the same with his food. Every ounce he ate was calculated and weighed before it was prepared, and before he ate it. His diet was small quantities, were supplemented with small draughts of cream milk, the latter the yield of his famous Alderleys and Guernseys, together with the tenderest part of the chicken or mare, as he was so much so as to be readily masticated, made up his diet. These viands, temptingly cooked and carried to his lips by his attendant, frequently failed to cause his appetite, and were returned almost untouched. It was a matter of comment among his intimates that he should have been able to eat so little without resorting to such a diet.

SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.
Samuel Jones Tilden was born on Feb. 4, 1814, in New Lebanon, Columbia county, N. Y. His father and his grandfather were farmers, but Samuel was sent to Yale college in 1835. He stayed there only a short time, entering the University of New York, from which he graduated. Tilden was admitted to the bar in 1837 and began a practice in New York city, but he left the law business to become an editor in 1844, when his old charge of the Morning News, a daily paper established to advocate Polk's election to the presidency.

In 1855 Mr. Tilden was elected to the New York assembly, and a year later was chosen a member of the constitutional convention. He ran for the attorney generalship of the state in 1858 as a Democrat, but was defeated, and returned to the practice of law. His brilliant legal talents placed him in the front rank of the New York bar, and he accumulated a large fortune. He became chairman of the Democratic state committee in 1865, and was a member of the constitutional convention in 1867. Later, when the Tweed and other rascals were forced to resign, Mr. Tilden gave all his time and his rare talents and energy to breaking up their corrupt practices, in which he ultimately succeeded, with the assistance of other public-minded men, in doing it. It was to him, more than to any one else that the arrest and conviction of Boss Tweed and the enforced flight of his pals were due. The people recognized this fact, for in 1872 they elected Mr. Tilden again to the assembly, where he was conspicuous on the side of reform. In 1874 he ran for governor and was easily elected, obtaining a plurality of 54,317 votes over John A. Dix and Byron H. Clark, candidates respectively of the Republicans and Prohibitionists.

As governor Mr. Tilden's policy of honesty and reform was carried out thoroughly. He went at his old work of breaking up the rings which had been feeding on the public purse so long, and his success was admirable. In June, 1876, when the Democratic presidential convention met at St. Louis, the same day, preliminary to the election of a president, he was elected to the office of governor. On the first ballot he received 100% of the 715 votes, on the second ballot a total of 728, and then his nomination was made unanimous.

The history of the campaign and election is too well known to need repeating. Tilden received a popular majority over his opponent, Governor Rutherford B. Hayes, but the latter was finally given the office by the electoral commission.

This closed Mr. Tilden's political career. He retired to Greystone, his country mansion, and although his political career was closed, he was not at all idle. He refused to re-enter politics. He was content to end his days in the peace and quiet of retirement.

COMMENT ON THE EVENT.

Universal Expression of Sorrow—Influence on Politics—Opinions at Washington City.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 5.—The news of the death of Mr. Tilden was received in this city after 9 o'clock, Wednesday morning, and spread rapidly over the city. As the announcement of his death had not been preceded by any news of his serious illness, it created great surprise. The president heard of his death about 9:30, and at once sent the following telegram of sympathy to Mr. Tilden's nephew, Col. Samuel J. Tilden: "I have just heard of the death of your illustrious relative, Samuel J. Tilden, and hasten to express my individual sorrow in an event by which the state of New York has lost her most distinguished and most patriotic counselor."

"GROVER CLEVELAND."
Most of the cabinet officers called at the executive mansion during the forenoon to see the president in relation to matters connected with their respective departments, and the death of Mr. Tilden was a subject of conversation between the president and his advisers. They all expressed regret and sorrow at the death of the great leader of the Democratic party.

At the capital, Democratic senators and representatives expressed the highest regard for Mr. Tilden and accorded him the highest place in history. Among Republicans there was no disposition to criticize the dead statesman, and they spoke of him as a leader of integrity and ability, and a good citizen.

He was a big man, said Senator Hoar. "No doubt of that, but his death will not cause any trouble in the party. No man is essential to this world. Every gap caused by death is immediately filled. Why you might as well say that you are in a basket of water and expect to make a hole in it to see any man miss from the busy affairs of life."

Other Democratic senators agreed substantially with the opinions of Senator Hoar. All of them speaking in high terms of Mr. Tilden, but holding that his political power will pass to other hands in the party and be wielded for the good of the Democratic party.

Mr. Randall, when he heard of Mr. Tilden's death, was visibly moved and spoke feelingly of it. "It is bad news," he said. "All our old chiefs are dropping off. This is a great loss. I have known him when he was a young man, and I have known him when he was a great man. He was a great man, and his death is a great loss to the party."

The fact was commented upon that since the present administration came into power, the Democratic candidates of the Democratic party have passed away. These are Gen. Hancock and McClellan, Vice President Hendricks, Horatio Seymour, and Mr. Tilden.

New York City Democratic Note.
New York, Aug. 5.—Meetings of the various political organizations of New York city and Brooklyn, including Tammany hall, were held Wednesday evening, and resolved to observe the death of Mr. Tilden and to display flags at half-mast. Every building of prominence down town had its flag lowered at half-mast. All the public buildings as soon as the death of Mr. Tilden was verified. The expression of sorrow was general, and the Democratic leaders united in saying that his death was a heavy loss to his party.

Feeling at Chicago.
CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—No feeling except that of sorrow was felt in Chicago when the news of Mr. Tilden's death came. Most of the prominent politicians of the city had been brought into contact with the great man during his career, especially while he was a candidate for president in 1876, and their personal knowledge of the lofty qualities of his character heightened the respect they felt for him as a leader of the Democratic party and one of the brightest political lights of the day. The calamity was so thoroughly unexpected, however, that for a few moments there was a feeling of bewilderment. The business men of the city lost no time in paying a tribute to the statesman's memory by displaying flags at half-mast. Every building of prominence down town had its flag lowered at half-mast. All the public buildings as soon as the death of Mr. Tilden was verified. The expression of sorrow was general, and the Democratic leaders united in saying that his death was a heavy loss to his party.

At Cincinnati.
CINCINNATI, Aug. 5.—The news of the death of Samuel J. Tilden created a profound sensation here. The expression was very general, almost universal, that a great man had departed. Richard Smith of the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette said: "The building alone is nearly $100,000, while it is said the library is worth $100,000."

The People's Friend Friend.
PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 5.—A special meeting, Wednesday, the executive committee of the Philadelphia Democracy passed resolutions of sorrow for Mr. Tilden's death, declaring that the party had lost its finest adviser, the best friend, the most able and the cause of good government its ablest defender.

A Monumental Menace.
New York, Aug. 5.—For several years Mr. Tilden had intended to bequeath his beautiful residence on Gramercy park, with its large collection of rare books, to the city of New York. In his will he has made ample provision for its transfer to three trustees for the purpose named. Messrs. John Bigelow, of this city, Mantou Marble, and Henry Waterson, of Kentucky, are the three trustees named. The building alone is nearly $100,000, while it is said the library is worth $100,000.

For Hay Fever.
Give Dr. J. C. Graefenberg's trial. This catarrh, hay fever, cold in the head, etc., can be cured by the use of Graefenberg's remedy, and may be relied upon as safe and pleasant remedy for the above complaints and will give immediate relief. It is not a liquid, snuff or powder, has no offensive odor, and is used at any time with good results as thousands can testify, among them some of the attaches of this office.—Spirit of the Times, May 29, 1888.

STRIKES IN THE PACKING HOUSES.
Chicago Packers Make a Move to Reduce Wages.
CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—A revised scale of wages, contemplating a slight reduction of pay, was presented to the 300 men employed in J. C. Hately & Co.'s packing house Wednesday morning. All of the men, with the exception of perhaps fifteen monthly men, immediately quit work.

The employees of the Anglo-American Packing and Provision company were informed Wednesday morning that instead of the present scale of wages, they would receive nine hours pay for eight hours work. All the men in the firm house quit work. It is supposed that the action of Hately & Co. is the basis agreed upon by the packing men, and the similar scale will be submitted by the packing firms to their 10,000 employees at an early day.

THE RIGHTS OF LABOR

To Be Advocated by a New Party—Call for a National Meeting.
INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 5.—A call was issued Wednesday for a national meeting in this city Sept. 1 of Knights of Labor, Grangers, Greenbackers, Anti-Monopolists, and all elements which harmonize outside the old parties to form a new political party with the rights of labor as the chief cornerstone. The state central committee of the Greenback party was in session Wednesday, and its members expressed views that the new party, if formed, will swallow up their organization.

The Chicago Anarchist Trial.
CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—The most interesting testimony given in the Anarchist trial Wednesday was that of August Krumm and William Albert, who swore that they were in the alley during the speaking at the Haymarket and up to the time the bomb exploded. The spies did not go into the alley; that while they were there Krumm hit a match and with it lit his own and Albert's pipes. It was also shown that Krumm very closely resembled Spies, except that he was a German, and that the testimony was to break the force of the evidence, as he might have mistaken Krumm for Spies. A dozen or so witnesses testified that there was no violent meeting; that it was just about to disperse when the police arrived on the ground; that the police did all the shooting, and that the bomb did not come from the alley. The defense offered the testimony of Krumm and Mrs. Gough to the effect that Seliger told them that his statements to the police were made through fear, but the evidence was excluded. William Reddie and Dietrich Buehner swore that they, one of the prisoners, were two miles from the Haymarket at the time of the explosion.

A Clergyman Assassinated.
STOCK CITY, Iowa, Aug. 5.—The cowardly assassination of Rev. C. C. Hancock, a Methodist preacher of this place, Tuesday evening, has created the greatest indignation. The perpetrator of the crime is at large, nor is there a clue to his identity. But opinion is universal that the murder grew out of the temperance movement and the attempt to enforce the prohibitory law here. Mr. Hancock was an outspoken prohibitionist and foremost in the work of enforcing the law. Governor Larrabee has offered a reward of $500 for the apprehension of the miscreant who committed the dastardly deed, and there is intense excitement throughout the city.

Thoroughbreds at Work.
BOSTON, N. Y., Aug. 5.—Little Joe won the 227th race, correctly predicted, at Wednesday, William C. second, best time, 2:28. The 248th race was won by Silver Thread, Ben Starr second, best time, 2:30. The 249th race was won by Brighton Dash Wednesday: Western 1/2 mile, Sam Bennett 1/2 mile, Montauk 1/2 mile, Pilot 1/2 mile, Vally Forge 1/2 mile, Bonnie 1/2 mile.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—The following horses won the races Wednesday at Washington park: J. H. Panton 1/2 mile, Lupton 1/2 mile, Clark 1/2 mile, Heretogis 1 1/2 mile, Allegany 1/2 mile.

AN OLD STORY REVAMPED.
The Venerable Woman Who Traded One Egg to Great Advantage.
Speaking of close competition, the historian is reminded of a case out west that probably came as an unbridling flood down to England as anything that Massachusetts dealers are familiar with. Two rival "general dealers" struck a new town with their commercial enterprise shops (the same day, and each set about running at the other. They dealt in every sort of goods needed to supply the wants of a primitive community. One of the dealers, in order to completely put his competitor to rout, announced that he would give a free drink of whisky with every purchase, and the business was done.

There have upon the dealer's vision one afternoon a venerable female, who proceeded to unload from her pocket-handkerchief, with much impressiveness, a single hen's egg, which she laid upon the counter.

"What are you giving for eggs?" said she.

"Twenty-five cents a dozen," said the dealer.

"Well, think a little over two cents apiece," said the old woman. "What are you giving for damian needles?"

"A cent apiece," said the dealer.

"Take for two cents, I suppose. Well, take this 'ere egg and give me three damian needles."

The dealer agreed to the bargain and passed her over the damian needles.

"Now for the drink," said the old woman. The bottle and tumbler were set out and the old woman poured a liberal portion into her glass.

"Say, stranger," said she, "I don't like whisky more without an egg in it. Break one in, will you?"

The dealer shrugged his shoulders and broke into the woman's glass the egg that he had just "traded" for. And behold, as he did so three yells fell into the whisky.

"Herey!" said the old woman, as she drank off the contents of the glass. "It's a double-yolked egg. Now, give me three more damian needles, please, for the extra yolk!"

The dealer passed out the three extra needles with a sighing resignation, and the old woman sat around as if she were waiting for something.

"I say, stranger," she said, finally, "you don't call them three last damian needles a new trade do you?"

The dealer reached for his gun and the woman disappeared through the door.—Boston Record.

THE WASTING DISEASES OF INFANTS and children are by no means confined to an insufficient supply of food. The trouble is that the food is indigestibly selected, and the limited digestive power of the child is unable to assimilate it. Mellin's food, when prepared according to the directions, forms the best substitute for mother's milk that has ever been produced.
